

Celebrating thirty years of home grown industry

UK Cubicles of Cross Hills are celebrating thirty years of home grown industry. Managing Director Mark Finn started the business aged just 21, having served his apprenticeship with his father's business, a plumbing heating and building company.

Mark realised a company who manufactured their own bespoke units, as well as installing them, would provide a strong unique selling point. Since then, Mark has grown his business through three recessions and from a year one starting turnover of £16,000 has managed to grow to today's annual turnover of £1.2 million.

With associates all over the UK and a convenient online design and ordering service Mark says, "We know that to be continually successful, you have to be prepared to accept, and be open to, change."
